Pakistan sentences 5 hijackers to death

RAWALPINDI, July 6, (Reuter): A Palestinian sentenced to death today for hijacking a US airliner vowed he would do it again if he had the chance.

A Pakistani court sentenced Salman Ali Al Turki and four other Palestinians to hang for the 1986 hijacking of a Pan Am-jumbo jet at Karachi airport in which 2I people were killed.

An unrepentant Turki, said to have masterminded the hijacking, told reporters later: "If we gn out we will hijack another American plane. We will hijack again and again until our country (Palestine) is free."

ZI AL OADAH 23-24, I 408 AH

IRAN does not want to retaliate against any airline anywhere in the world, an official in the charge d'affaire's office at the Iranian embassy in Kuwait said yesterday.

The statement made by the official, who did not divulge his name during a telephonic interview, contradicts reported threats of revenge made by Iranian leaders, including Ayatollah Khomeini, after the downing of a civilian jet in the Gulf.

All 290 passengers aboard that Iran Air plane died when at least one missile, fired by the US cruiser Vincennes, hit the plane minutes after it took off from the port of Bandar Abbas for Dubai.

Revenge

Khomeini vowed revenge after the Airbus was shot down saying the "attack was a warning to all travellers.

Khomeini also made a call for a "full-fledged" war against America. Reports from Tehran, and statements made by leaders, indicate a split among Iran's leaders over the retaliation strategy. Ayatollah Hossain Ali Montazeri, Khomeini's designated successor, has said that the time is ripe for retaliation. Iran's parliamentary Speaker Ali Akhar Hashemi Rafsanjani, without discounting the idea of revenge, said "the timing is up to

Threats

The US has taken the retaliatory threats seriously and imposed a full alert at all its embassies around the world.

On Tuesday Iran protested to the United Nations over the incident and called for an urgent meeting of the UN Security Council to condemn the US.

The Iranian official in Kuwait would seek compensation from the US.

The official said two Kuwaitis died in the incident. He added they were children aged four and six. hut he could not give further information or identify with whom they were travelling. The two Kuwaiti children were

Adm. William Fogarty, a senior staff officer at US Central Com-Reagan terms message of regret an apology

WASHINGTON, July 6, (UPI): President Reagan terms his expression of deep regret to Iran an apology for the US downing of a commercial Iranian jetliner, and he and members of Congress are weighing the merits of compensation for deaths. With debate heating up on the proper response to the incident, the President was pressed by reporters yesterday to define the diplomatic note he sent to Iran in the wake of the weekend tragedy. "Yes," he replied when asked if the message constituted an apology. White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater subsequently told reporters Reagan was saying his public as well as his private statements could be mterpreted that way.

Israel confusing Palestinians

OCCUPIED JERUSALEM, July 6, (Reuter): Palestinians accused Israel's secret police today of distributing bogus leaflets in an attempt to sow confusion in the occupied West Bank where underground leaders of an Arab revolt have called a strike.

The 21 communique by the leadership of the uprising, issued on Tuesday in the West Bank and Amman, called for a two-day strike on Saturday and Sunday, and urged Palestinians to boycott Israeli products and services.

The bogus leaflet, also purpor-ting to come from the "unified command" and widely distributed in Arab East Jerusalem and Ramallah, called for a sevenday strike next week - longer than any previous protest.

One Western news organisation had even reported the bogus leaflet as genuine, he said.

The authentic leaflet called for violent protests against Israeli archaeological excavations near the Al Aqsa Mosque, one of Islam's holiest site, in the old city of Jerusalem.

It also urged Palestinians to cut ties with Israeli occupation authorities, from self-governing local committees and co-operate with Israeli leftists "who recognise Palestinian rights."

The false leaflet supported a call by senior Palestine Liberation Organisation (PLO) official Bassam Abu Sharif for talks between Israel and the PLO in an international conference.

Many Palestinians said the contradiction between the radical demand for a seven-day strike and the endorsement of Abu Sharif's dovish stance proved the leaflet was a fake. The real communique made

Egypt readmitted to Arab League body

TUNIS, July 6, (AP): Egypt has been formally readmitted to the Arab League Educational Cultural and Scientific Organisation effective next December, the organisation announced today.

In a closed-door meeting of the 20-member ALECSO executive commission last night, all but two members voted for Egypt's return ALECSO spokesman Ahmed Gabsi said only Libyan. delegate Abdallah Hourani voted against the measure, while Syria's Ait Abdou abstained.

ALECSO is the Arab equivalent of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organisation, UNESCO, with which it works in close cooperation.

Linked to the Arab League, ALECSO has an independent $6-million hudget for its activities throughout the Arah world. But unlike the Arab League, its executive commission takes decisions by majority vote. In the Arah League, each member nation has veto power.

Efforts

Gabsi said Egypt was suspended from membership in April 1979 following its peace treaty with Israel. Efforts to bring Egypt back into the Arab League, which suspended Egyptian membership at the same time, remain blocked by the opposition of Libya, Syria and

Arafat loyalists surrender

BETRUT, July 6, (UPI); About 500 followers of Yasser Arafat defending their last strongholds at the sprawling shantytown of Bourj Al Barajneh in southern Beirut surrendered to pro-Syrian guerrillas encircling the camp, Palestinian sources said today.

The sources said 120 Farah guerrillas surrendered to their rivals late last night and at least 40 emerged from the ruins of the shantytown to give up earlier in the day, bringing to 500 the number of pro-Arafat fighters who laid down their guns in 48 hours at Bourj Al Barajneh.

"There is a small number of Fatah fighters still inside the camp. They want guarantees for their safety from Syria to surrender," said a source at the Popular Front for the Liberation of Pales-

The surrender came after the anti-Arafat guerrillas of the Fatah Uprising group pounded the sprawling camp with rockets and mortars for five hours, killing three people and wounding 12 others, the source said. The rebels faced weak resistance, they said.

More than 100 people have been killed and 300 wounded in two months of Palestinian fighting for control of Bourj Al Barajneh and the nearby smaller camp of Shatila, which fell to the dissidents June 27. The sources' said morale within the Arafat camp weakened considerably after the rival guerrillas destroyed most of Bourj Al Barajneh's only hospital.

The three-storey hospital was badly damaged by Fatah Uprising artillery, forcing Algerian and Palestinian doctors to evacuate, said a spokesman for the Democratic Front for the Liberation of Palestine. Tolerance

"Life and tolerance in the camp have become impossible now," the spokesman said.

He said Libyan military officers who tried to act as mediators to balt the fighting had stopped their initiative.

The Salmi border post's officer in charge, Khaled Mansour Al Dousari, said that one thousand cars were inspected on a daily basis, the busiest days being Wednesdays, Thursdays and Fridays. He pointed out that some travellers created problems by ignoring laws and regulations, for instance when they bring prohibited foodstuffs into Kuwait. He said that the public customs department provided border posts with a larger oumber of inspectors to face the rush during the summer and haj. Iospectors at Salmi post are distributed over three shifts, 30 officers on each. They are considered as security men who protect the security and the economy of the country and prevent the entry of prohibited items, narcotics and firearms being highest on the list of things detected at the post.

Al Dousari said the number of travellers was rising, especially since the opening of the short cut via Nwiabia road. He added that there had been many developments at the post since its establishment and that inspection officers regularly underweat training to match developments at all levels.

Spanish Socialists come under fire

By Fracols Raltberger

MADRID, (Reuter): Half-way through bis second four-year term as Spanish prime minister, Felipe Gonzalez is facing loud domestic criticism but appears to be one of the best-entrenched political leaders in Western Europe.

Critics variously accuse his ruling Socialist Workers' Party (PSOE) of falling for the trap-pings of power, peddling influence, being yuppies, aloof or arrogant.

The man-on-the-street often perjuratively refers to them as estos" (this lot).

Normal mid-term grumhling." a senior government official said, dismissing as temporary a wave of criticism in the press and on the streets.

Spain's international image is fast improving, although critics say Gonzalez cares more for prestige abroad than for workers

The economy is growing at an annual six per cent, faster than any other in the European Economic Community. But opponents say the recovery has led to three million jobless, the highest unemployment rate in Western

Inequalities

Social inequalities become more glaring as economic growth sends money flowing through the banking and services

There are many more luxury cars around, but also more beggars than a few years ago.

The new opulence of central Madrid is in striking contrast to run-down northern towns where police battle angry workers left obless by the streamlining of loss-making beavy industry.

Anti-inflation wage restraiot policies have caused a major rift between the PSOE and its trade union arm, the General Union of Workers (UGT), as workers clamour for a larger part of the growing prosperity.

Two cases involving allegaing an outcry. Seven policemen are on trial in connection with the disappearance of a petty criminal, and a judge is investigating accusations that a police officer helped set up death squads to stamp out Basque separatist guerrillas.

But despite criticism of the government, opinion polls show Gonzalez, 46 and in power since 1982, is headed for a third four-year term in general elections in What's the alternative?" salesman Manuel Pantin asked, echoing widely-expressed disenchantment. Falled

Opposition parties, numbed hy the Socialists' six-year-old dominance in parliament, have failed to capitalise on the social discontent.

The most recent political test, elections for a regional parliament in Catalonia last May, belied press forecasts of a PSOE decline.

Catalan Nationalists won the poll hut the PSOE easily held its ground, while the right-wing main opposition Popular Alliance (AP) Party lost nearly

The centrists of former Premier Adolfo Suarez, who has vowed to win office again and is seen by the Socialists as their most dangerous rival, failed to make an expected breakthrough.

Government officials say their private opinion polls show the PSOE would win the next general election but might lost, the absolute majority it bas beld

Although he bas ruled out any major policy change, there are signs that Gonzalez will soon try to recapture the initiative ahead of next year's elections to the European Parliament.

Officials said he was poised to reshuffle his cabinet in which several ministers bave been serving for six years.

Benefits He is reported to be preparing to boost social benefits in next year's budget, and he bas recently had talks with UGT leader Nicolas Redondo to try to patch up the dispute with the union. The opposition seems unable to mount a decisive challenge. The Socialists bave a party and a leader. The right bas a party but no leader and the centrists bave a leader witbout a party," a conservative politician Antonio Hernandez Manchan, who took over from veteran politician Manuel Fraga last year, faces a struggle for political survival as some fear he could lead the party to disaster in the general election. Fraga gave up the leadership of AP after critics said his role as a minister under the late General Francisco Franco limited the party's appeal to voters.

Soviet Communist Party conference

Orgy of democracy by Moscow's standards

By Gerald Nadier

MOSCOW, (UPI): By Soviet standards, the 19th Communist Party conference was an orgy of democracy that kept millions of Russians glued to their television screens sets to watch high-level political infighting for the first time in their lives.

"It was like the most gripping crime novel." said Nina Birzinskaya. 38. as she stood Sunday at a crowded billboard displaying newspaper accounts of the con-ference. "Nothing could compete with it - not even the best crime movie or the toughest soccer match. There has never been anything likethis in my lifetime."

Soviets stunned by the public airing of differences among Communist Party leaders lined up at dawn Sunday at newspaper kiosks and stood three-deep at newspaper billboards to soak up every word uttered in anger at the just-completed party conference.

The four-day conference, convened by Mikhail Gorbachev to consider major changes in the political system, ended Friday after a majority of its 5,000 delegates approved the Soviet leader's reform programmes of "glasnost," or openness, and "perestroika." or economic restructuring.

Democratic

The conference --- certainly measured against previous political discourse in the Soviet Union — was an orgy of democratic free expression.

Among the exchanges that the Soviet public found most electrifving were the vituperative assault by arch conservative Yegor Ligachev on deposed Moscow Party chief Boris Yeltsin, one delegate's demand for President Andrei Gromyko's resignation, and a posthumous assault on the late leader Konstantin Chernenko. Everything went on in secret (before)," said one citizen going from hillboard to hillboard to read the pages of Pravda, the party's official newspaper. "Now we know more."

Decision-making at the party's upper echelons had transpired behind closed doors since the mid-1920s, when former dic-tator Josef Stalin began his hrutal 30-year hold on power. Most official accounts of party actions were carried in terse "information communiques" that concealed much more than they revealed.

The hland reports, which many Soviets simply ignored, were a far cry from the conference session Friday night when Ligachev stormed the podium and hitterly bemoaned his own recommendation that politburo members vote for Yeltsin's inclusion in the elite inner core of the Central Committee.

"I cannot keep quiet, because comrade Yelisin has gotten on the wrong road. Ligachev lamented. "It turns out that he possesses destructive, not constructive, energy."

Yeltsin, a populist reformer who had angered ensconced Moscow city officials, was abruptly fired last fall after accusing Ligachev and other conservatives of sabotaging Gorbachev's attempts to overhaul the system. He levelled the attack at a closed Central Committee session, then leaked the incident to Western reporters who had a field day describing party infighting.

The affair became a major embarrassment for Gorbacbev. who stood by as his ally was subsequently stripped of his posts as Moscow party chief and politburo candidate member.

Autocratic qovernment

SIR: Democratic India is autocratically ruled. The prime minister, elected by the people acts in an autocratic manner. He hires and fires chief ministers and even tries to wave his magic wand to topple opposition parties. The chief ministers are members of state legislatures and are directly responsible to the electorate. Isn't it undemocratic to dismiss chief ministers?

The loopholes in the Indian constitution, even though amended several times, allow a ruling party to exercise their power in an autocratic manner.

The present government is run by a bunch of power-hungry, inexperienced, hand-picked henehmen. Indians should unite, forgetting their differences — class, creed, language and religion. By merging the numerous political parties, one or two strong parties could be formed. India's development is based on national unity. United we stand, divided we fall. The Indians can fulfil the Ram Raiya dream of the late Indian leader. Mahatma Gandhi only if we are nnited.

R. J. Saldanha Prabhu, Safat.

Judge by the achievements

SIR: This refers to Sunita Samtani's letter about school fees in private sebools. One must judge a school on its academic achievements rather than its

As a family, we consider ourselves fortunate that our children attended the New English School (NES) and achieved high academic results leading on to college and university in the UK. NES is an education centre of excellence and fully deserves its "Merit" award incorporated into the school Teachers' salaries have risen in the UK. If a school in Kuwait wishes to recruit good quality staff it has to pay a good salary. Therefore, I consider the lack of a swimming pool insignificant in comparison with the dedication of the teaching staff of high academic standards.

Palestinian detainees become local heroes

Prison experience helps perpetuate uprising

By George D. Moffett iii

Israeli-occupied HEBRON, West Bank: When Muhammad - not his real name - was arrested and sent four months ago to Israel's Kitsyot prison (better known as Ansar 3), be was just another teenager apprehended for throwing stones at a passing Israeli jeep.

Today, back home in his West Bank refugee camp, Muhammad is something of a local bero. He is more mature, politically sophisticated, and committed to the 7-month Palestinian intifada (uprising) against Israel's 21year occupation of the West Bank and Gaza Strip.

Israel has detained thousands of Palestinians since December to break the back of the uprising. But as even some Israeli officials concede, the prison experience, in many cases, bas probably bad the unintended reverse effect of perpetuating the intifadab by becoming a training school for it. In the crowded cells of dozens of Israeli prisons and detention centres, young men like Muhammad are making the contacts, learning the radical politics, and gaining the enhanced local presuge that have made them leaders of the uprising.

"I came out (of prison) with more commitment," says the 18-year-old Muhammad, who, like others interviewed, asked not to be named. "I'm more ready to become politically involved and more ready to take risks.

Respect

"I've gained more respect (in others' eyes) based on greater exposure and knowledge," he adds. The brief period in custody has made him something of a celebrity among the youngsters and teenagers who congregate around him as he makes his rounds of the camp. Even the elders seem deferential, as if to the first college graduate in a family of grade-school dropouts.

Ansar 3, a compound of barbed-wire fences, guard towers, and tents in the Negev Desert, is one of several detention centres operated by the Israeli Army to hold unconvicted prisoners. Detainees and human rights groups complain of overcrowding and cruel treatment at the facilities. Six eonventional prisons, operated by the Ministry of Police, hold sentenced prisoners.

Scared

One way prison nourishes the uprising is by providing exposure to other Palestinians with a common experience, several former inmates say.

Another former Ansar 3 detainee says that prison broke down a sense of isolation, which came from living in a small Arab village, and made him part of a common cause. Through the long hours of confinement, inmates brought together from around the West Bank and Gaza compare wounds and humiliations suffered under the Israeli occupation.

"It gives substance to what we've heard (about the occupation)," another former inmate and resident of Muhammad's

"It bas the opposite effect (from what the Israelis intended)," adds another, now living in Hebron. "I became less scared. because I saw that I was not Prison gives many Palestinians their first exposure to a structured political environment, because Israel keeps a tight rein on political activity in the occupied territories to prevent pro-Palestine Liberation Organisation (PLO) activities. In most Israeli prisons, networks of cell committees and designated spokesmen orchestrate protests and strikes in response to prison conditions that have been successful in exacting reforms from Israeli authorities.

People see the organisation (in the prisons) and they get ideas," a cause-and-effect relationship at work they've never seen before. These are lessons transferable to the jails also underscores the role Israel's conventional prisons play in the political indoctrination of Palestinians.

Daily "collective" sessions, usually involving anywhere from five to 25 inmates, are typically devoted to political instruction by inmates who belong to various PLO factions, like Al-Fatah and the Political Front for the Liberation of Palestine.

Homework

The sessions can last two bours and involve "homework" from books circulating through the prison's black market. They teach political theory and give a historical perspective to the upr-

Meanwhile, each faction has its own "magazine," usually no more than several hand-written pages, which circulates clandestinely throughout the prison. Another "layer" of education, says the former inmate, consists of weekly discussions by all the prisoners in one cell of political topics, usually current events and tactics to combat Israel's occupation. In the more transient detention centres, where prison terms are shorter, the regimen is less structured, focussing mostly on factional indoctrination, but with the same general political consciousness-raising effect. Short of having a guard in each cell, Israeli authorities concede there is little to be done to prevent the jails from becoming centres for political education. The prisons bave taught thousands of people, and this is helping in the uprising," a former inmate in Hebron says. "For me, 95 per cent of my conscience, my education, came from this school," says another former inmate, who entered a Ramallah jail at the age of 18. The Christian Science Monitor

Czechoslovaks wary of reforms

By Alison Smale

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia. (AP): Twenty years after Soviet tanks crusbed Alexander Dubcek's "Prague Spring" of reform, Czecboslovaks are deeply leery of the changes now proclaimed in Moscow and echoed by their iwii leaders. A key reason is that Dubcek was crushed and disgraced for trying them, or at least letting them go too far.

Czechoslovaks today wonder if the same will bappen to Mikhail Gorbachev and his Soviet reforms — perestroika (restruc-turing) and glasnost (openness) — leaving them worse off than they are now.

They are aware that old-time, conservative communists are still around and a fear of their traditional hard line remains.

The scepticism of reform surfaces in current jokes. What is the difference between Mikhail Gorbachev and Alexander Dubcek? None, but Gorbacbev doesn't know it yet. • What is the difference between perestroika and chess? In chess. you think before you move. Stunned

In the years after the Prague Spring, Czechs and Slovaks still seemed stunned by the Soviet-led invasion on the night of Aug 20-21, 1968, that erased Dubcek's movement to hring a new face to Czechoslovak communism multi-party polices, freedom of the press, speech and religion, a liberalised economy. When it was over Dubcek was expelled from the Communist Party and went off to his native Slovakia to work as a clerk in a forestry office.

At the same time, the chanting, singing, joyous people of the Prague Spring vanished from the streets and squares. Most retreated morosely back to their private lives to pursue a material wealth that was the party's reward for their political silence. In 1988, that post-invasion reward is running low. Czecboslovakia's outmoded industry is performing poorly, production targets and to slash coveted wage bonuses. Sbortages are again apparent

On the political front, while Prague's leaders tinker with reform, the winds of change blowing from Gorbachev's Kremlin are prompting more citizens to challenge the communists on issues ranging from ecology to cultural and religious

As one Prague man put it, Soviet reforms sound to Cze-choslovaks like "the right ideas from the wrong side."

Even deeper scepticism is reserved for the cautious reforms adopted so far by the communist leaders installed by Moscow 20 years ago to make sure Dubcek's experiments would not he repeated.

After spending 18 years assailing change. Czechoslovakia's communists have now fallen in step behind Gorbachev, endorsing perestroika and adopting the rhetoric of reforms. But the sense among many in Prague is that there is no guarantee of any meaningful or lasting effect. This past December, the party even changed its leader, substituting a 65-year-old apparat-chik. Milos Jakes (pronounced ya-kesh), for an increasingly frail Gustav Husak, 75.

Jakes immediately set about trying to revamp the image of the party leader, emulating Gorbachev by taking well-publicised trips to factories and farms to chat with workers.

Reforms

Borrowing many phrases from Gorbachev, Jakes spoke of the need for economic and social reform at a key party meeting in April that brought some new, younger faces into the party elite. But Jakes lacks Gorbachev's touch: At February's snow-dampened celebrations of the 40th anniversary of communist power, crowds streamed away from the square when Jakes got up to speak. Few Czechoslovaks can forget that it was Jakes who oversaw the expulsion of almost 500,000 party members in a post-Dubcek They also know that Husak, who took over from Dubcek in March 1969, is still on the ruling politburo. When Jakes talks of reform, however, he pointedly omits mention of glasnost, which has brought startling frankness to the Soviet media. Jakes stresses that Czechoslovakia's 1.7 million communists must dictate the pace and shape of any An unspoken fear is that reform will spin outside the party's control, as the communists say it did in Dubcek's days. Even economic ebange is treated with extreme caution, particularly by managers who report that overhasty reforms in the Soviet Union are making it difficult for them to deal with Soviet enterprises.

Planned decentralisation of management is not likely to go as far here as it has in the Soviet Union and won't be in full force until 1991.

tries and trades, and there are also some, whose "business" remains unmentionable. But in most cases it is untaxed or black money that is flowing into the entertainment world. One such new company held a grand party at the huge pool side of Sea Rock Hotel. Our friends warned us that we would see faces one can never see in the daylight in Bombay. We were also advised not to stay on too late in the night.

And indeed, the people who started coming, accompanied by tough looking men were strange and unknown. Yet they were photographed, videographed and showered with flower petals. Drinks and cats were there in abundance. But strangely nobody was allowed to take away a bottle of soda or soft drink to his chair. The chief guest Rajendra Kumar came and went, looking a bit lost and confused. important stars to be seen, except the small ones and aspiring TV-video artistes. Channa Ruparel made an impression with her lovely smile straight from her TV serial "Chunauti". She said we will soon see more of her on the box. A real surprise was petite Jaya Mathur. She has acted as Raza Murad's daughter in "Aaj ke Angarey". And though the film was not producers. Villain Ajit's two good-looking sons were also there. We wondered why they had not yet been grahbed by producers. But then, they insist on making their dehut only as heroes, especially after Aamer Khan has made it in "Qayamat Se Qayamat Tak". We decided to leave the party soon after the huffet dinner started. It proved a wise step. We were later told that around 2 am the expected gang fight took place with chairs and bottles flying. (Perhaps that's why they were keep-ing all the bottles in one place.) Companies making and releasing video films also held parties, like the Tristar Video for "Achanak", the story of a free-loving woman. Hiha films is about a gossip writer probing a star's life and also "Janjaal" Many such films are now available in video libraries and parlours. Some people have said that these were like porno films not fit to be taken home. Still there is a big demand for them. One established video company has decided to fulfill its real intentions by entering the big feature film market.

It is the Multi-Channel

Group which has become popular with the "Lehren" video magazine on filmi activities. They have joined hands with the big industrialists Garwares, who are already into manufacturing high quality video cassettes at their plant and also distributing video films. A big party was held at Juhu Centaur Hotel to do the "muhurat" and announce their film written by Mahesh Bhatt, starring Dimple. A mini set was set up inside the huge Harbour Hall. Dimple had arrived to face the camera. But she got the news in the parking lot itself. She was so stunned that she could not even speak to the press-men. She just turned, sat in the car and went back home. So starlets Suoarna and Sahila Chadha stole the limelight at the party.

Anyway, eating and even drinking was going on at another party, at the same time, in the nearby Hotel Horizon. The Hussain brothers, Nasir and Tahir were in great mood as they celchrated the platinum disc function for "Hamara Khandaan" along with Super Cassettes. The hall was decorated with its posters and photos. Trophies were lined up behind the table, though there were not many to receive them. Before the party, we were shown five pieturised songs from the film at Sumeet recording theatre. The sound was kept so loud that it pierced the ears. They are used to doing it in order to impress distributors. But it was good to see Farha and her charming smile on the big screen, as she sang and danced with Rishi Kapoor. There was one song in the falsetto voice of Ila Arun, playing a Muslim mendicant.

QUESTION: I've recently taken up tennis, and now my elbow is killing me. I've heard of tennis elbow, but what is it? What should I

ANSWER: "Tennis elhow" is somewhat common in the underconditioned "weekend athlete," who is usually older than 35. Your extensor muscle group cannot readily absorb the force required for hitting a tennis ball, and so the elbow becomes strained. This can become a serious problem if not treated, and it requires medical attention from the beginning so you can get it under control and build strength in your arm. The doctor first may prescribe oral nonsteroidal anti-inflammatory drugs to relieve pain and inflammation. You should temporarily stop playing tennis, but it is important to begin exercises to strengthen the elbow as soon as possible. Another effective treatment is the use of ice applications. Cover the elbow with ice for 10-15 minutes, several times a day. This can help reduce inflammation and provide analgesia.

The single most important thing for you to do to manage your elbow overload injury is to begin a progressive resistance exercise programme to strengthen the extensor muscles and increase their ability to absorb shock. QUESTION: Are tranquilizers any good for preventing jet lag?

ANSWER: It is true that some of the super-fast-acting tranquilizers such as triazolam are being advertised as being valuable in reducing or preventing jet lag and related biological-clock disorders which seem to be a part of global travel. And it is true that this kind of hype is leading many people to experiment with these drugs to enhance sleep during east-west (as opposed to north-south) flights in order to lessen the fatigue and anxiety caused by flying. But this doesn't mean that it works.

So far, no official report has been published regarding the pros and cons of tranquilizer use during air travel. But doctors who have used triazolam for jet lag report suffering from instances of anterograde amnesia, or an inability to remember anything over a number of hours during the morning after taking the drug for sleep. Although they apparently hehaved appropriately, their memory definitely was impaired. And that makes this use of tranquilizers a real no-no.

QUESTION: My family has a history of breast cancer. I've recently heard that drinking alcoholic beverages increases a woman's risk of developing breast cancer. Is this true? I occasionally enjoy a cocktail and have somewine with dinner now and then. Must I ANSWER: Several recent studies indicate there may well be a link between alcohol consumption and hreast cancer. A study by the National Health and Nutrition Examination Survey showed that even drinking small amounts of alcohol — the equivalent of three drinks a week - could increase the risk of breast cancer 40 per cent to 50 per cent over that for non-drinkers. Drinking more than that amount increased the risk by 50 per cent to 100 per cent.

A study at Harvard found similar results - that women who had one or more drinks a day increased their chances of breast cancer by 60 per cent. Even if these studies are not the final word, you certainly would be wise to at least cut down on alcohol. It would appear that doing so would indeed lower your risk factors, which is especially important if your family has a history of breast

Eating his money

MULLA NASRUDIN, as everyone knows, comes from a country where fruit, and meat is meat, and curry is never eaten.

One day he was plodding along a dusty Indian road, having newly descended from the high mountains of Kafiristan. when a great thirst overtook him. 'Soon', he said to himself. 'I must come across somewhere that good fruit is to be had.' No sooner were the words formed in his brain than be rounded a comer and saw sitting in the shade of a tree a benevolent-looking man, with a basket in front of him.

Piled high in the basket were huge, shiny red fruits. This is what I need, said Nasrudin. Taking two tiny coppers from the knot at the end of his turban, he handed them to the fruit-seller.

Without a word the man handed bim the whole basket, for this kind of fruit is cheap in Indie, end people usually buy it in smaller amounts.

Nasrudin sat down in the place vacated by the fruiterer, and started to munch the fruits. Within a few seconds, his mouth was burning. Teers streamed down his cheeks, fire was in his throat. The Mulla went on eating.

An hour or two passed, and then an Afghan hillman came past. Nesrudin hailed him. Brother, these infidel fruits must come from the very mouth of Sheitan!"

'Fool!' said the hillman. 'Hast thou never heard of the chillis of Hindustan? Stop eating them at once, or death will surely claim a victim before the sun is down.

'I cannot move from here,' gasped the Mulia, 'until I have finished the whole basketful. 'Medman! Those fruits belong in curry! Throw them

'I am not eating fruit any more, croaked Nasrudin, 'l am eating my money.

The yogi, the priest and the Sufi

NASRUDIN put on a Sufi robe and decided to make a pious journey. On his way he mete priest and a yogi, and they decided to team up together. When they got to a village the others asked him to seek donations while they carried out tbeir devotions. Nasrudin collected some money and bought halwa with it.

He suggested that they divide the food, but the others, who were not yet hungry enough, said that it should be postponed unul night. They continued on their way, and when night fell Nasrudin asked for the first portion 'because I was the means of getting the food. The others disagreed: the priest on the grounds that he represented a properly organised hierar-chical hody, and should therefore have preference; the yogi because, he said, be ate only once in three days and sbould therefore have more. Finally they decided to sleep. In the morning, the one who related the best dream should have first choice of the halwa. In the morning the priest said: 'In my dreams I saw the founder of my religion, who made a sign of benediction, singling me out as especially hles-

The gold, the cloak and the horse

'I CANNOT get a job,' said the Mulla, 'because' am already in the service of the All-Highest.' 'In that case,' said his wife, ask for your wages, because every employer must pay.'

Quite right, thought

Nasrudin. 'I have not been paid simply because I have never asked, he said aloud. Then you had better go and Nasrudin went into the garden, knelt and cried out: 'O Allah, send me a hundred pieces of gold, for all my past services are worth at least that much in back pay.

His neighbour, a moneylen-der, thought he would play a joke on Nasrudin. Takinga bag of a hundred gold pieces be threw it down from a window. Nasrudin stood up with dignity and took the money to his wife. 'I am one of the saints,' he told her. 'Here are my arrears.'

She was very impressed. Presently, made suspicious by the succession of delivery men carrying food, clothing and furniture into Nasrudin's bouse, the neighbour went to get his money back.

You heard me calling for it, and now you are pretending it is yours,' said Nasrudin. 'You shall never have it.

The neighbour said that be would take Nasrudin to the court of summary jurisdiction. 'I cannot go like this,' said Nasrudin. 'I have no suitable clotbes, nor have I a horse. If we appear together the judge will be prejudiced in your fevour by my mean appearance.'

The neighbour took off his own cloak and gave it to Nasrudin, then he mounted him on his own horse, and they went before the Cadi.

The plaintiff was heard first. "What is your defence?" the magistrate asked Nasrudin. That my neighbour is NASRUDIN climbed a tree to saw through a branch. A passer-by who saw what he was doingcried: 'Look out! You are on thewrong side of the branch. You will fall with it

However much be tried, the other man could not now convince Nasrudin that he was not a seer. Ultimately he lost his temper and said: 'You might as well die now.

As soon as be heard these words the Mulla fell down and lay still. His neighbours came and found him and put him in a coffin. As they were walking towards the cemetery, there was a dispute as to the sbortest route. Nesrudin lost his patience. Raising his head from the coffin he said: 'When I was alive. I used to turn left here that is the quickest way."

The exploit

IN THE teahouse, some soldiers were boasting about their recent campeign. The local inhabitants crowded eagerly around them to listen.

'And', one fearsome-looking warrior was saying, 'I took my double-edged sword and charged the enemy, scattering them to right and left like chaff. We carried the day.

There was a gasp of applause.

'Thet reminds me', said Nasrudin, who had seen a few battles in his time, 'of the time when I cut off the leg of an enemy on the battlefield. Severed it right through.

You would have done better, sir, replied the captain of the soldiers, 'to have cut off his

Saudi firm plans to build steel foundry on Gulf coast

BAHRAIN, July 6, (Reuter): A Saudi Arabian company said yesterday it planned to build a 117 million rival ($30 million) steel foundry on the kingdom's Gulf coast

The National Industrialisatioo Co (NIC) said construction in the city of Dammam was scheduled to begin in the first quarter of 1989.

The foundry would use grey iron, ductile iron and some non-ferrous metals to produce 12,000 tonnes of steel products a year, including motor industry castings, water and sewage pipe fit-tings, valves, pumps and agricultural equipment.

The project will be financed 50 per cent by a government loan from the Saudi Industrial Development Fund, 25 per cent by commercial bank loans and 25 per cent hy NIC. An NIC spokesman in Riyadh said the company would later. invite private Saudi investors to take a share in the project.

Many companies have cut staff and reduced salaries

Slowdown in Gulf economic growth affects expatriates

The Gulf International Bank of Bahrain in its monthly report said the slowdown in Gulf countries' economic activities in the last few years has had a ooticeable impact on the oumber, skill composition and salaries of. expatriates living in the region. With the completion of major infrastructural projects many companies, especially construction firms, have cut staff and reduced salaries and employees'

Others started replacing Western expatriates with the oormally less expensive employees from the Middle East and Asia. There are indications of changing immigration trends to the Gulf countries in the last three years. A large oumber of unsk-illed and semi-skilled constructioo workers mainly from Asia have left the region. Other groups that have been vulnerable to the current economic slowdown are expatriates and above all civil service.

These are precisely the kinds of positions to which the Gulf and where the nationalisation of jobs is most visible.

One of the chief objectives of Saudi Arabia's fourth Five-year plan for example, is the reduction of the expatriate labour force by 600,000 workers with their positions being filled hy nationals.

Trend The trend of replacing Americans and Europeans by equally qualified but less expensive Arabs and Asians is believed to have continued as well. A lot of Western companies resorted to . sending to the Gulf more employees from their subsidiaries abroad, such as India, Pakistan and South East Asia as tbese teed to accept lower remmeration packages. The culture and religion of Arab expatriates are similar to those of the Gulf and they consider the region to be less of a hardship area thao do expatriates from Europe and the United States. Even in the lower skilled jobs, workers from certain nationalities who are willing to accept lower salaries a: e replacing those who refuse to adjust to a lower pay scale. house helpers by Sri Lankans. There has been a change in the distribution of the non-national population by age group and sex over the last ten years. The distribution heavily weighted in favour of males in the working age group 15-64 years as many expatriate workers, especially the unskilled, tend to leave their families behind during their stay in the Gulf.

What is noticeable however, is the rising percentage of migrant workers' dependents in the last few years. As more unskilled workers leave the region, the pool of transient labour among expatriates is becoming smaller. Inclined

Those planning to stay in the Gulf for more than two years are inclined to bring their families with them. Labour market trends point to the continuation of the process of demographic settling in the region.

While in 1980, around 25 per cent of ooo-nationals in the six GCC countries were females and nearly 20 per cent were aged less than 15 years, in 1985 more dependents (wives and children) of expatriate workers appear to have settled in the region. Nearly 30 per cent of oonnationals were less than 15 years old and over 34 per cent were

The North American. European and to a lesser extent the non-national Arabs are the most balanced communities in terms of age structure and sex. The profiles of these commumities reflect either a longer durarioo of residence in the case of the Arab expatriates (around 80 per cent of oon-national Arabs stay in the region for more than two years), or the extent to which recently arrived Europeans and Americans, oormally assigned to managerial and technical positions, bring their families with the majority in the age group 15-35. Some 30 per cent of South East Asian females are economically active mainly as nurses or househelpers.

Decline

Another feature of the changing labour market structure is the general decline in the wage levels and remuneration packages that expatriates can expect. Today, the Gulf region is an employer's rather than ao employee's market. Living conditions are considerably better than few years ago, and the need to pay substantially high wages to attract workers is oo longer present.

The situation has led several labour exporting countries to lower the recommended minimum wage of their workers.

For example, by the end of 1986 Pakistan announced a 15 per cent wage cut for nationals minimum wage for its unskilled labour is now close to $140 a month. Other labour exporting countries (Egypt, India, Bangladesh, Sri Lanka etc.) invariably followed suit.

Development According to a random sample compiled hy the Saudi Gazette, salaries for selected expatriate positions in the Kingdom have fallen hy up to 50 per cent in the last three years. The largest drop io moothly salaries was reported for a general office workers, construction workers, plumbers, messengers, drivers and geoeral low skilled However, salaries for certaio highly skilled jobs have actually increased during the last three years. There has been a steadily growing need for specialists in computers, finance, banking, utilities' operations and many other specialities required in the up-market industrial, services and operations and maintenance sectors.

The reserve of qualified nonnationals in the region to serve this function is enormous. There are close to two million skilled expatriates in the six Gulf states, this is more than the total oumber of instructors in the secondary and higher education levels by at least fifty to one.

The potential to harness expatriate 'know-bow' is readily available to policymakers. Various institutions could be obliged to make provisions for oo-the-job training of their national employees to be certified upon completion. Improvements Fulfilment of this obligation could be monitored by governments and tied to future public sector contracts or partially subsidised for the additional cost incurred. A logical extension of this con-

Such programmes would help eliminate the social stigma which vocational training bas inherited and hridge the gap between academia and the corporate

"We welcome Taiwan business people to come and tap the potential here and make money, and we would like to learn from their expertise," Yuan Mu, spokesman for the State Council, China's cahinet, told a news conference in the Great Hall of the People.

World Business Summary

S. Korea eases restrictions on overseas investments

SEOUL, July 6, (AP): South Korea will drastically ease its restrictions on investment in overseas real estate to allow individuals to buy houses, land and other real estate, according to a government draft plan released today. Officials at the Finance Ministry said that, under the draft measures, overseas purchases by South Korean nationals will be subject to the Bank of Korea's approval and limited to $1 million per person. The Ministry officials said the measures are expected to gu into effect later this month following revisions to foreign exchange control regulations. They said business corporations will be exempt from any government control in purchasing real estate overseas valued at up to $1 million, but will need approval from the Central Bank when a transaction exceeds $1 million. They said, however, both individual and corporate investors will be banned from buying luxurious villas in world resort areas. They said the new measures are intended to spur investment abroad and trim the country's large current account surplus in n bid to avoid friction with the United States and other countries which run trade deficits with South Korea. The country's current account surplus reached $9.8 billion in 1987 and is projected to hit the $10-billion mark this year unless steps are taken to hold it down. Under the new meass the scope of corporate purchases, now limited to business-related property such as offices, warehouses, parking lots and exhibit halls, will be expanded to include houses, welfare facilities, forest land and other types of real estate, the officials said.

African oil producers to meet in Benin this month

LAGOS, July 6, (OPECNA): The African Petroleum Producers' Association (APPA) is to meet in Cotonou, Benin Republic, on July 18. According to a spokesman of the Nigerian National Petroleum Corporation (NNPC), oil ministers of the eight member states belonging to APPA will receive reports of seminars on the promotion of communication among the African producers. The spokesman said that the sharing of oil industry information was 'important' to the group. APPA links OPEC members Algeria, Gabon, Libya and Nigeria with Angola, Benin, Cameroon and Congo. The association was launched in Nigeria in January 1987. President Ibrahim Babangida said on the occasion that Africa was 'grossly under-explored', but the continent's fortunes could not be left entirely in the hands of multinationals. The inaugural conference, chaired by OPEC president Al Haji Riiwanu Lukman, expressed confidence in OPEC actions to stabilise the oil market. APPA's first ministerial meeting in Algiers in July last year also pledged to work with OPEC and adopted an 18-month plan of action to exchange information and data, and study exploration, production, refining, marketing, training and technical assistance through seminars, workshops and research. At its last meeting io Luanda, Angola, in January this year, the APPA Council of Ministers discussed the international oil market and the organisation's budget. The meeting in Cotonou will be expected to decide on APPA's headquarters for which both Gabon and Congo are being considered.

Costa Rica refinery reports possible oil reserves

SAN JOSE, July 6, (Reuter): Costa Rica could have up to 500 million barrels of oil in the land along its Pacific coast, the national refinery said yesterday. The Costa Rican Oil Refinery, known as Recope, said it had consulted geologists from Western Atlas International who found that characteristics of the Costa Rican subsoil were "adequate for the production and reserves of Recope send a team to open negotiations with the Costa Rican government about possibly investing in exploration. No further details were available. The state-owned refinery quoted the senior Western Atlas geologist in Costa Rica, Glena Penfield, as saying "the information has been well-received and awakened great interests" in major oil companies. Traces of oil have been found in Costa Rica, but never in quantities that would encourage commercial exploitation.

Jamaica sees 'large unexplored possibilities' in South-South ties

LAGOS, July 6, (OPECNA): Former Jamaican Prime Minister Michael Manley said here yesterday that there were "large mexplored possibilities" for South-South co-operation. Deliver-ing the first guardian annual lecture on "the debt trap, structural adjustment and the future of the Third World," Manley said such possibilities existed in trade, common services and joint production. They were awaiting "the attention of planners and the energy of entrepreneurs of the South," be added. The former prime minister said opportunities were to be sought within the broad areas of collective self-reliance and regional co-operation. Developing countries had to begin to create their own transitional corporate enterprises in response to the "inexorable forces," of chnological change, Manley urged. "Regional bodies in Africa, the Caribbean, Asia and the Pacific should become beehives of activity, seeking every point at which goods may be exchanged and productive systems linked and rationalised," be said. He proposed that regional stock exchanges should be brought into being to ensure that private capital and entrepreneurship played their full part. But be stressed that the need should not be seen in a "confrontationist context," arguing that the search should be rather for new opportunities in creating growth through incremental activity. The former prime minister said the debt problem of the Third World was currently engaging the attention of the South-South Commission "established with the blessing of the Non-Aligned movement" and working under the chairmanship of Dr Julius Nyerere, former Tanzanian president. He said developing countries hud to develop a greater capacity for economic analysis, become "numerate as well as literate" and relate development strategies to indigenous culture in order to obtain meaningful economic development.

IEA reports increase in world oil supply in second quarter of 1988

PARIS, July 6, (KUNA): World oil supply in the second quarter of 1988 was at 49.3 million barrels per day, n rise of 2.3 millions from the same period last year, 1EA reported today. A report by the International Energy Agency (IEA) said the increase of world oil output was mainly due to overproduction by OPEC states in the month of June, reaching 18.4 million b/d. But the IEA oil market report said although OPEC production is the primary reason for the year-on-year gain, both Western nations of the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD) and developing countries' production in the second year of this year was higher than the figures of the same period a year ago. It said that crude production from OPEC countries in June is tentatively estimated at 18.4 million barrels per day which represents a decrease of a 0.3 million bpd from May due to small reductions in output from Iran and the UAE. The estimates of the second quarter in 1988 OPEC crude production of 18.5 million bpd represents an increase of 1.0 million over the previous quarter and 1.6 million over the same period last year. It said that while several OPEC countries bave experienced changes in production level over recent years, the largest increase in both volumetric and percentage terms has been Iraq. Due to additional pipeline capacity, the report said Iraqi production has risen more than one-third from 1.9 million bpd to the second quarter of 1987 to 2.6 million in the same period this year. Conversely, Iranian production has declined from 2.4 million to 2.2 million which has marginally reduced its share of OPEC crude production to 12 per cent behind Iraq's 14 per cent.

Wall Street Market Report

NEW YORK, July 6, (Reuter): Wall Street stocks continued their slow decline with blue chips showing moderate losses. Brokers said traders had pulled back from the market due to a hesitant dollar and uncertain bond market. Commodity prices rose slightly and were not a major factor, anelysts said. The Dow 30 index was down six points at 2153 and declining issues opened up a moderate mergin over gainers.

Several utilities showed up on the active list in dividend ralated trading, brokers said. Nevada Power, the most active NYSE issue, was unchanged at 21-1/8.

Tokyo Stock Market Report

TOKYO STOCKS CLOSE NIGHER IN HEAVY TRADE TOKYO, JULY 6, REUTER - SHARE PRICES CLOSED HIGHER DUE TO HEAVY TRADING OF SHIPBUILDING AND HEAVY ELECTRICAL SHARES AS INVESTORS WERE MORE RELAXED WITH A CALHER YEN/DOLLAR RATE. "IT CERTAINLY IS GOOD THAT THE MARKET IS UP, BUT IT IS HARD TO SAY WHAT IS GOING ON WITH EXCHANGE RATES," SAIO A FUND MANAGER AT THE BANK OF TOKYO. "IN THE SHORT-TERM, THINGS LOOK

GOOD, BUT IN THE LONG TERM, FEARS STILL EXIST." THE NIKKET INDEX CLIMBED 189.43 POINTS, OR 0.69 PCT, TO 27,766.60. IT SURGED 216.78 POINTS ON TUESDAY. PRELIMINARY FIGURES INDICATE THE SHARE VOLUME MAY EXCEED THE RECORD 2.83 BILLION SET ON MARCH 27, 1987.

ELECTRICAL, GAS, ROLLING STOCK, AUTO, PRECISION INSTRUMENT, SHIPBUILDING, RETAIL, MACHINERY, SMIPPIMG, GLASS/CEMENT AND SOME MANUFACTURING SHARES LED THE ADVANCE.
CONMUNICATIONS, CREDIT/LEASE, REAL ESTATE, WAREHOUSE, CONSTRUCTION, BANK, PHARNACEUTICAL, MINING, NON-LIFE INSURANCE, OIL AND AIRLINE ISSUES FELL.

FALLS LED RISES FIVE TO FOUR. ADVANCES WERE CONCENTRATED ON A LIMITED NUMBER OF SHARES AND THIS OID NOT REFLECT A BROADLY BASED MARKET RISE, BROKERS SAID.

AFTER A LONG HOLIDAY WEEKEND, WALL STREET'S 27-POINT JUMP OVERNIGHT HAD PROVIDED INITIAL MORNING OPTINISM NERE. A DOLLAR HOVERING BELOW 134 YEN THROUGHOUT THE DAY HELPED

ATTRACT FURTHER BUYING. *THERE WAS A REBOUND IN THE YEN YESTERDAY, AS WELL AS TODAY, " SAID BROKER AT A LARGE JAPANESE SECURITIES HOUSE. WHILE PROFIT-TAKING IN THE DOLLAR IS INEVITABLE, THERE IS FEELING THE DOLLAR MAT NOT GO MUCH OVER 135 YEN." HOWEVER, WITH THE SCHEDULED JULT 15 RELEASE OF U.S. TRADE OATA LOOMING OVER THE MARKET AND A U.S. PRESIDENTIAL ELECTION THIS FALL, THERE IS LINGERING CONCERN THAT THE COLLAR COULD RALLY ONCE AGAIN, BROKERS SAID.

Hong Kong Market Report

HONG KONG, JULY 6, REUTER - STRONG INSTITUTIONAL BUYING PUSHED SHARE PRICES SHARPLY HIGHER AND SAW THE HANG SENG STOCK INDEX CLOSING AT 2,737.51, ITS HIGHEST SINCE THE OCTOBER CRASH ON WORLD BOURSES, BROKERS SAIO.

THE INDEX ROSE SS.60 POINTS, OR 2.07 PCT, FROM TUESDAY'S CLOSE, AND THE BROADER BASED HONG KONG INDEX WAS UP 37.06 AT 1,810.58. TURNOVER ROSE SHARPLT TO 1.18 BILLION H.K. DLRS FROM 670.45 MLN ON TUESDAY.

BROKERS SAID BUYING FOCUSED ON THE FINANCIALS WITH HONGKONG BANK LEADING THE ACTIVE LIST FOR THE THIRD CONBECUTIVE TRADING DAT.

Japan newspaper president resigns over share scandal

TOKYO, July 6, (Reuter): The presideor of Japan's leading financial newspaper resigned today over a stocks insider trading scandal which a national daily alleged involved leading government politicians.

A spokesman for the Nihon Keizai Shimbun Group told a news conference that while President Ko Morita's trading in the shares of the real estate company recruit Cosmos was not strictly illegal, it posed ethical "Presideot Morita wants to regard this case as a moral problem, and wants to take the responsibility in order to prevent his personal problems from causing problems for the company." the spokesman said.

The group also publishes a string of influential financial newspapers and magazines and operates a global financial information service.

The Asahi Shimbun newspaper alleged today that several leading government politicians had traded shares in the real estate company in the names of their secretaries.

A spokesman for the real estate firm said it had sold shares prior to their public placement in December 1984.

One of the politicians named, Secretary-General of the ruling Liberal Democratic Party Shintaro Abe, denied the allegation.

"It is none of my husiness. I do not know whether or not my secretary engaged in such tran-sactions but I will check," the former foreign minister told

"There are some regulations on such transactions but politicians, the general public, and even journalists have had freedom to do it,"he said.

Parliament this year passed new laws to clamp down on insider trading on Japanese share markets, which Finance Ministry officials have described as rampant.

Asked if a report in the latest Asahi weekly magazine that Morita's profit from the sale of the stock amounted to 80 million yen was correct, the spokesman replied. "That is more or less

"The transaction and making profit out of it was not illegal. It is a moral problem. A person in a high position in the news media must be responsible," the spokesman said.

"Such a case as this involving moral questions overrides rules and regulations," he added.

He said the company had told reporters and other employees to refrain from lovolving themselves in stock transactions.

US oil prices rally after seesaw session

NEW YORK, July 6, (Reuter): US oil prices rallied yesterday as heightened tensions in the Middle East prompted traders to huy back oil they had sold last week.

But the price recovery came only after bargain huying brought prices off 20-month lows reached early in the session. The price of West Texas Intermediate, the main American grade of oil, rose I Scents a barrel on the futures market after the three-day weekend to close at $15.09 for oil delivered next month. The price on the spot market — where actual barrels are traded - saw a similar rise. Prices opened higher as US traders had their first opportuoity to buy oil following news that a US warship on Sunday shot down an Iranian airliner. Overseas markets on Monday initially rose, but fell back as traders opted to see how US traders would react to the news.

"The market was supported by the attack (on the Iranian airliner)," said Jim Steel, analyst at Refco Inc. Oil traders said the incident increased tensions in the already volatile Mideast Gulf region but was unlikely to directly affect the shipment of oil through the Gulf. About oce-sixth of oil from the non-Communist world is shipped through the Gulf, but as loog as there is so much oil available, the shock value is diminished, traders said. And so the initial price rise yesterday gave way to profit taking and prices soon fell under $15, a level not seen since November 1985 when oil began a dramatic decline, which culminated in prices falling to 10.80 barrel by July 1986.

OPEC members are pumping oil at the highest rate in nine months and fasier than they can sell it, according to a range of industry sources.

Dow Jones industrial average edges higher

Dollar eases as Bundesbank again moves to push it lower dollar eased again tuday as West Germany's central bank continued a campaign of forcing the US currency down.

The pause in the dollar's nearly nne-month old rally unsettled Wall Street stocks the Dow Jones industrial average had edged just 5.33 points higher to 2,163.94 by midday after a 27point gain yesterday.

Firmed Stock markets elsewhere firmed. A weaker dollar means less risk of inflation in Europe and Asia, even if it risks hurting exporters' sales. In Hong Kong, shares jumped two per cent as the Hang Seng index hit a post crash

But many investors are being cautious. They say West Ger-many seems to be alone in trying to balt a dollar rally triggered by a declining US trade deficit and huovant American economy. With underlying improvement in the US trade position from dallars into Britain's pound becoming manifest in the monthly reports, we believe investor sentiment for the dollar is becoming increasingly positive," said Paul Chertkov, director of economic research at London stockbrokers Hoare Govett.

The dollar slipped about 0.25 pfennigs to close at 1.8220 West But, said a senior dealer for big German hank, "It seems the roller-coaster ride of the last few weeks is over." The dollar recently touched

1.83 marks. It closed in New York yesterday just under 1.82 and it traded just above that level in Europe today.

Fetched It fetched around 133.75 Japanese yen today. Earlier this week it rose above 135. Dealers said open market intervention led by West Germany's Bundesbank, which has repeatedly sold dollars and did so again today, seemed to have capped the dollar ascent for now. Mucb of the hot money flowed

Britain is trying to pinch off a credit-driven consumer spending hinge, which is syphoning in imports and threatening higher inflation, and this week it took its leading interest rates up to a relatively high 10 per cent.

Five British interest rate rises in about a month have boosted the yield on sterling assets - and the pound today rose to around $1.7130 and 3.1240 marks - up from 1.7040 and 3.1059 yester-

Economists say a strong pound puts Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's Conservative government in a bind. It makes it arder to use the weapon of high interest rates against inflation since, if these drive the pound yet higher, British exports risk being overpriced in foreign markets.

High-yield Other high-yield currencies to attract money moving out of the dollar were the Australian and New Zealand dollars. Stock markets today were mostly higher after Wall Street yesterday surged 27 points, takday. Shares also rose in Frankfurt, ing the Dow Jones industrial average to 2,158.61, its best since October's crash. The weaker dollar was a prime factor in Tokyo where the Nikkei stock index climbed 189.43 points to 27.766.60. Lately, the dollar rally has prompted fears about inflation in Japan.

"It is certainly good that the market is up, but it is hard to say what is going on with exchange rates," said a fund manager at the Bank of Tokyo. "In the short-term, things look good, but in the long-term fears still

Shrugged off

Elsewbere, the Australian All-Ordinaries Index surged 16.7 points to close at 1589.2 and Hong Kong's Hang Seng index ended, like Wall Street, at a post-crash high. It closed at 2,737.51 up 55 points or more than two

London caught the mood, although trading was light, and the FTSE index of 100 blue chips was up 14 around 1,869 at mid-

Three members seek emergency OPEC meeting

THREE OPEC member states are considering a call for an emergency meeting of the 13nation organisation if world oil prices continue to weaken, the Kuwait News Agency reported

Citing high-level senior industry sources, it said that consultations were under way among officials from Venezuela, Algeria and Ecuador.

The unnamed sources told KUNA that the talks have not yet reached a point where there has been any official contact with other members of the Organisation of Petroleum Exporting Countries over the proposed emergency meeting.

Positive response KUNA quoted its sources as saying that some OPEC nations would give a "positive response" to a call for an emergency ses-

But they said that "major" member states would not readily accept because of lack of guarantees an emergency meeting would have any positive affect on the organisation's policies or the world oil market.

KUNA did not elaborate. But the reference to nations which might object to an emergency meeting without any prospect of a consensus on policy apparently pointed to Kuwait and Saudi Both OPEC states have opposed calls for emergency sessions without first establishing clear objectives.

The news agency said that its sources hinted that Venezuela, Algeria and Ecuador might ask Secretary-General Subroto, the former Indonesian oil minister, to canvas member states about support for an emergency mecting. KUNA's sources said that production quota violations hy several OPEC countries have resulted in an output excess of 3.5 million barrels a day over an overall ceiling of 15.06 million barrels by 12 of the organisation's members.

Emphasised Traders ascribed the rise to short-term speculative buying the American abead of Petroleum Institute's weekly report on US oil stocks, but emphasised that the market remained depressed because of oversupply and the outlook for prices was down.

Some analysts speculated that if the jetliner had been shot down during a business day, prices would have surged, at least initially. But because many traders bad time to assess the risks while most world oil markets were closed, the reaction was muted.

KD deposit rates ease

KUWAITI dinar deposit rates eased yesterday as hanks unwound dollar positions. dealers said.

The dinar, which last week fell to nine-month lows against the dollar, gained modestly yesterday when the Central Bank put its dinar exchange rate at 0.28193/203 to the dollar from Tuesday's 0.28223/33.

Commercial hanks quoted spot dinar rates of around 0.28194/201.

The issue of KD70 million in three-month Treasury bills had little effect on liquidity since an earlier issue for the same amount matured yesterday.

Tomorrow-next funds, which surged to 6-1/4 per cent on Tuesday ahead of the bill issue, plunged to one per cent along with spot-next. Overnight traded at three per cent.

One-month business fell to 6-1/8 and six per cent from Tuesday's 6-1/2 per cent, and quotes for the one through three-month maturities were 1/8 point lower at 6-1/2, 1/4 per cent. Twomonth deals were reported at 6-1/4 per cent and three-month at 6-1/2 per cent.

PRAGUE, July 6, (Reuter): Comecon prime ministers heard impatient calls for a radical shake-up of the I0-nation Communist trading alliance but some of their allies showed resistance to change. Soviet Premier Nikolai Ryzhkov and Hungarian Deputy Premier Jozsef Marjai complained about sluggish economie co-operation and other shortcomings plaguing the group. while East Germany and Romania said nothing about

Several member countries bave admitted that widely divergent stages of economic development, different price levels and the need for unanimity in all important decisions are hampering economie growth and effective integration within the ten-

In his speech, Ryzhkov criticised the lack of a "flexible commodity-monetary mechanism, which can be formed only in conditions of a realistic market," meaning prices based on actual costs, product quality, world market trends and other factors. Ryzhkov said this was hampering economic progress in member countries and even technological achievements. He also complained ahout "the unresolved questions of (poor) quality, low competitiveness and stagnation in the structure" of goods exchanges.

Marjai insisted that if radical changes do not come soon, Comecon co-operation "will not be a moving force but a serious Obstacle in the inevitable processes of restructuring which have started in various countries." According to the news agency CTK, Marjai, who led the Hungarian delegation in the absence of Premier Karoly Gross, added

As soon as Hercules reached the palace of the tyrant, he challenged him to single combat. Killing him after a swift and sharp struggle, he threw the king's body into the stables to be devoured by his own horses. Then he holdly stepped into the midst of the fierce creatures, fastened them together by strong straps head to head. and drove them to the mountains. There, in course of time, many of them were killed by lions.

The ninth labour of Hercules was to conquer the Amazons, a nation of strong and warlike women, and to bring back as a sign of victory the girdle of gold and gems worn hy their queen. These women warriors were feared by the best armies of men for their skill in use of the bow and in throwing the javelin.

Hercules made it known all over Greece that he was going to fight the Amazons, and many brave men, eager for adventure, joined him. The Amazons fought on horsehack, as was their custom, and the Greeks on foot. In the hattle Hercules was successful, but, of all his labours, it proved one of the hardest and most dangerous. # The twelve labours of Hercules of the Mediterranean and the Straits of Gibraltar, to the west coast of Africa. Months passed before he reached the land where Geryon lived. Even then he had to cross great mountains, and to follow the windings of long valleys, before he could find the monster.

But at last he was rewarded by seeing the terrible creature, with his dog by his side, sitting at the entrance to a great cavern. Both Geryon and his companion rushed upon Hercules so suddenly that he had not time to use his bow. A fearful struggle took place, the monster and the dog against the man. But soon the hideous two lay dead at the feet of their conqueror. The tenth labour of Hercules ended when he drove the flocks of Geryon to the mountain slopes, there to he devoured hy the lions of Africa.

After the slaying of Geryon and the dog, Hercules returned to Greece by way of the mainland of Europe, a long and toil-some journey. But he had no time to rest after his great labours, for, on the day of his arrival home, a messenger met him from King Eurystheus, with orders to start at once in search of the golden apples from the garden of the Hesperides.

The Hesperides were three beautiful maidens whose work was to guard the tree bearing the golden apples presented hy Jupiter to the queen of the gods. The maidens were assisted in their task by a dragon, over whose huge body sprouted a hundred hideous heads.

lt was a dangerous task, and the distance was great. for the apples grew in that far-off Africa from which Hercules had only just returned. But with a brave heart, not giving himself one day's rest, he set forth again to Africa to do his he held him firmly until he had answered every question. Then, with a light heart, our hero travelled towards Africa. Having landed in the north, he was able, through what had been told him by Nereus, to reach the garden of the golden apples. How to get the treasures was now his chief difficulty; if he won the fight with the dragon, there still remained the three fair maidens to oppose him, and the greatest hero of his time replied Atlas, 'all the guidance in the world would not bring you into that magic garden. But if you will carry my burden for a while, I will gladly go myself and ohtain the golden apples for you.'

'That I will gladly do,' cried the hero; and, in a moment, the giant bent his knees and placed the load of the heavens upon the shoulders of Hercules. There he meant it to remain, for he was a cunning giant, and had grown tired of his weary burden. It did not take him long to reach the garden and pluck the golden apples. As soon as he had returned, he placed the sacred treasures in the hands of Hercules. Then, laughing with joy at being free from his heavy hurden, he began to walk merrily away.

'Stay hut for a little while, shouted the astonished Hercules; 'if I am to carry your load, place it more comfortably upon my shoulders. It is only right that you should show me that kindness.'

The giant at once agreed to do what Hercules wished, and with both hands he raised the load so that it might lie more easily. As soon as the hero felt the weight lifted from him, he ran swiftly to a distance. Then he turned round for one last look at the angry and disappointed Atlas, and laughed in triumph as he heard the cries of the giant, which sounded like the pealing of thunder.

Thus his eleventh labour was performed. The twelfth and last was to descend into the earth's depths and bring up the fearful threeheaded dog, Cerberus, which was as hig as an elephant. Each hair of the head of this awful creature was a snake, and earthquakes were caused whenever it barked. Hercules was not allowed by the ruler of the lower regions to have any weapons in his fight with the monster; he must use only his own hodily strength. After a struggle which lasted dur-ing a whole day, he con-quered the dog, and carried it alive to King Eurystheus. Then he was ordered to take the creature hack to its den in the rocky depths of the earth.

All this he did with as much success as in his other labours; and when the hero's tasks were done he won glory, both in heaven and on earth. When the end of his life came the gods promised that he should reign with them in glory forever, as a reward for doing his duty so patiently and so hravely.

The why of plants

along the coasts of Africa and in other tropical areas. Some people call it the king of plants because of the wide range of products which can he obtained from it.

It is a beautiful tree with a strong trunk growing to a height of nearly 33 metres and ending in a tuft of fanshaped leaves, each of them from 4 to 5 metres in length. Male and female flowers develop in the axils of the leaves and are in small inflorescences or groups. The fruit which they produce are well known oval coconuts weighing as much as 2 kilos. When they are on the trees, however, the nuts are not the dark brown colour which we know. They are covered with a thick fibrous husk, green in colour, which is removed hefore the coconut is put on sale. The fibres are used for making matting and ropes.

A palm tree can produce as many as ten bunches of coconuts, each composed of ten to twelve nuts. Be-

The coconut palm grows weaker as the water gets deeper. For instance, the red rays are filtered first by the sea water and are therefore stopped at a shallow depth. These rays are practically the only ones used by the green seaweeds which are therefore on the sea beds nearest to the surface. The brown ones and in particular the red ones, on the other hand, can live below a depth of 100 metres because they are

Aouita forced to work hard for win

(Reuter): Morocco's world record holder Said Aouita was forced to work hard for victory in the men's 1,500 metres at the Stockholm Grand Prix last night.

The Moroccan Olympic and world 5,000 metres champion eventually won in three minntes 35.70 seconds with Kenyan Kip Cheruyiot second in 3:36.36.

Aouita was surprised on the back straight of the final lap when Cheruyiot overtook him with 250 metres to run.

Cheruyiot flew around the

Drechsler

(Reuter): Heike Drechsler, the most talented of East Germany's elite crop of women track and field athletes, looks set to become the most successful at this year's Scoul Olympics.

Handicapped hy an injury to her left knee, Drechsler could manage only four or her allotted six long jumps at last year's World Championships and had to settle for second place behind American Jackie Joyner.

She also won silver in the 100 metres behind teammate Silke Moeller and missed the chance of another medal when the injury forced her to withdraw from the sprint relay team.

After her dazzling performances of 1986, when she won the long jump and 200 metres at the European Championships, the Rome World Championships were a disappointment for the 23-year-old East German.

But although Drechsler dearly wished to retain her world long jump utle she has made it ahundantly clear since where her priorities lie.

Meant

Drechsler was emphatic when she told reporters at March's European Indoor Champion-ships in Budapest that an Olympic medal meant far more to her than a world title.

East European sportswriters said this was a common attitude among the East Germans who missed the 1984 Olympics hecause of the Soviet-led boycou.

Drechsler also raised some evehrows when she said she feared the Soviet long jumpers more than Joyner,

Since then Galina Chistyakova has partially vindicated her judgement by hreaking the world record held jointly by Drechsler and Joyner.

Drechsler: In action during a long jump event

The significance of Chistyakova's jump is hard to evaluate in a northern season extended significantly by the late start to the Olympic Games which do not get underway until mid-September. But although no athlete with Olympic aspirations should be more than approaching top form at this time of the year Drechsler's consistent excellence is impossible to ignore. She has clocked the year's fastest time over 200 metres, 21.84 at the East German Championships this month, and only American Florence Griffith-Joyner has run faster over 100 metres. In addition, she has also jumped 7.37 metres indoors.

Drechsler's 100 metres run in Saturday's Bislett Games, when she clocked 10.91 seconds on a rain-drenched track, was something of a revelation.

The long-legged East German has not been noted for the speed of her start but on Saturday she flew out of the blocks and scorched to a personal best perfor-

Drechsler seemed slightly surprised as well as pleased after-

Yes, she said, it was a good time under the conditions. Yes, it had given her confidence. More significantly, Drechsler then revealed that she had already decided on her events for

She said the long jump was her first priority followed by one of the sprints. Drechsler said she had already decided which one she would run hut refused 10 comment further, except to add that she would not be a member of the 4x 100 metre relay team.

The picture was slightly confused at a news conference here on Monday when Drechsler said she would leave her decision until Seoul.

'After the long jump in Seoul I will decide whether to run in the 100 or 200 metres," she said,

Despite her remarkable successes as a sprinter in the last three seasons Drechsler's first commitment is to the long jump.

As an 18-year-old she was the youngest gold medalist at the 1983 Helsinki World Championships and she continues to work remorselessly at her discipline. Clear Drechsler's string of recent 100 metres races has helped to improve her approach speed and she has also been practising hard on her takeoff.

"My higgest improvement must come from my takeoff," she said. Drechsler is unlikely to compete against either Joyner or Chistyakova before the Olym-But shemade it clear she would like to meet either or both at least once. "I would like to compete against them to know where I stand," she said.
